

23. Story of Athisuran

Athisuran was born in Chandar clan in Einanoor in Cholawala country. Jealousy, deceit, cruelty and other evils are compatible. In his time there was a man named Enadinathar. He also came from Chandar clan. He is full of love for God and His people. He is also good at swordsmanship. By teaching it to others and earning from it, Amudhoothi was living his life as a servant. Athisuran also followed his profession. His self-improvement and abundant material income made him very jealous. He fought and saw Enadiyar several times. could not At last he decided to kill by deceit. He called them to a private place to fight. He also said: He went as he was called. He turned away knowing that God would punish those who applied water. He smeared his forehead with a lot of water and went to him with a bow like Shivanati. He was closing the border. When I went to the side, I removed my cover and showed him my servant. He decided that he had become his slave and did not throw his sword at him. Ivano killed him and knocked him down. What good is the best lie when his mind is guilty of knowing it? It was well understood by him that it would not do any good.
