

28. The story of Anadari

There was a man named Andari in a town called Vayal in Tondaivala country. In order to get his education, he came to the deceased who was living in Urathur in the Cholawala country and got his education. Eventually he excelled in education. Singarayan, the leader of Kanarapur, was amazed to see his academic ability. He asked Anthana to sell Anthari to him. Andhana also sold the same way. His erudition spread all over the city and he sang a song poem to a servant named Dandayuthan on the orders of Singaraya. His name and fame eventually spread throughout the country. Madurai Chokka na Tapperumanpadu He translated Sundarapandyam in Tamil and staged it.

"Anathari Chepung Tamil's Poem of the Card"

[Andarib Pulavan]