

31. Story of Anabayan

In ancient times, there was a Chola man named Tiruvarur in the Cholawala country called Anabayan. He is said to be Chola who saw human justice because he understood the rule of manu manu. A son was born to him. He named him Vethividangan. He learned all the arts in his youth and became proficient in them. One day he went down the street surrounded by his companions. Then one of the cow's calves jumped out, got caught in the wheel of his chariot and was crushed and died on the spot. The cow that lost her calf bleated; He went to the palace gate. The research bell that was built there shook with its horn. The king was disturbed when he heard the research bell. He longed for the best; He decided that he should suffer like Appas. He put his son down and ordered his minister to drive the chariot up. Unsatisfied with doing so, the minister took his own life. Then the king took his brother to the street, laid him down and drove the chariot over him. The Lord appeared and blessed the king. It is said that the Lord and Yama came as a cow and a calf to show the world the power of the goddess's sceptre. Everyone praises Amman Nana even today for the fact that the king is still his son and the middle ground is the same. The best virtue for a king is to wield the scepter equally to all.
