

47. Story of Aravan

Aravan was born to Aruchuna from a dragon named Ulupi. He is very talented. He is endowed with excellent organs and opposite hairs. No one can beat him. He was eager to annihilate his enemies in the Indian war. Duryodhana intended to perform a field sacrifice before the start of the war. He decided that this Arava was the best for Kalapali. He came to him as a trick. The Pandavas were gifted with respect for their enemies. In this way, Ivanun welcomed Duryodhana and praised him. I came to consider what? He said. Duryodhana told the matter. He did not deny. He said, "Take me and sacrifice me." But Mayavan, the master of magic, tricked Duryodhana into making him useless and took him as a Pandava and sacrificed him. Aravan is still very famous for his self-sacrifice. It was explained to him that in the life which is the improvement of fame, the death of fame is not for those who are better than the best in knowledge.
